Premises for this Presentation

- Parents love their kids and want the best for them, including the best education; this is not impacted by homelessness.
- Parents experiencing homelessness should have the same consideration and opportunities for decision making regarding their child's education, as does any other parent.
- Many parents experiencing homelessness have great difficulty working with schools and supporting their child's education.
- Local liaisons and schools can help parents become effective partners in their child's education.

Parents and the McKinney-Vento Act - Key Provisions

- Provide transportation to and from the school of origin, at the request of a parent; ensure that parents are informed of all transportation services available to them.
- Presume that keeping a child or youth in the school of origin, except when doing so is contrary to the request of the child's or youth's parent; give priority to the request of the parent regarding school selection.
- If the LEA disagrees with the parent's request, the LEA must provide a written explanation of the reasons and include information on the right to appeal the decision according to the dispute resolution policy.

Parents and the McKinney-Vento Act - Key Provisions

Local liaisons must inform parents of children experiencing homelessness of educational opportunities for their children and provide them with meaningful opportunities to participate in the education of their children.

Post public notices of the educational rights of children experiencing homelessness, at locations frequented by parents or guardians, in easy to understandable ways.

What We Hear From Local Liaisons

I don't think the mom was even listening to me.

The parent insisted that we enroll her child in a school that wasn't the local school or the school of origin.

We arranged a bus pick up and the child wasn't there.

The dad barged into the office and told me off!

The mom lied about where they were staying.

Why Parents Experiencing Homelessness May Be Difficult

What a Parent May Bring to the Table	Behaviors Demonstrated
Parent may have unmet basic needs; feels stressed	Rudeness, lack of focus
Parent is embarrassed and defensive about homelessness; fearful of their child being removed	Rudeness, unwillingness to provide information, lying
Parent may have had bad experiences in school or other systems; mistrusts the liaison or any other administrator	Ready to fight for what they want (any means justifies the end); expectation that the liaison will provide barriers; confrontational and bullying

Why Parents Experiencing Homelessness May Be Difficult

What a Parent May Bring to the Table	Behaviors Demonstrated
Parent feels hopeless and defeated	Unwilling to be an active partner, forgetful of what was agreed to, misses deadlines or appointments i.e..“client mentality”
Parents are unfamiliar with resources or what their educational rights are	Frustration over how to help their child, or at how little the local liaison or school is willing to do
Parents may have mental illness or substance abuse problems	Inappropriate, aggressive, or confrontational interactions

Trauma Impacts

NYSTEACHS.org

MEASUREMENT
INCORPORATED

What Is Trauma?

- Emotional response to a distressing event that overwhelms the person's ability to cope or integrate the emotions involved with the experience.
- Results in intense feelings of fear and lack of control.
- Leaves people feeling helpless.
- Changes the way individuals understand themselves, the world, and others.
- Can occur even if the event did not cause physical harm.
- It is the person's experience of the event, not the event itself, that determines whether something is traumatic.

NYSTEACHS.org

The New York State Technical and Educational
Assistance Center for Homeless Students

MEASUREMENT
INCORPORATED

What Is Complex Trauma?

- Chronic exposure to traumatic events
- Results are similar to PTSD
- Adversely affects attention, memory, cognition
 - Interferes with effective problem solving and planning
 - Results in overwhelming feelings of frustration and anxiety
- Can lead people to be suspicious and distrustful; over-react to minor disagreements or misunderstandings

NYSTEACHS.org

The New York State Technical and Educational
Assistance Center for Homeless Students

MEASUREMENT
INCORPORATED

What Is a Trigger?

- False alarm that reminds someone of a traumatic event
- Evokes a response as if the traumatic event was truly occurring
- Over-activates the amygdala, which helps regulate how we respond to fear, and results in a survival response: flight, fight, or freeze

There Is Always a Story Behind the Behavior

A key question to ask is,
“What happened to you?”

Not, “What is wrong with you?”

Build a Relationship

- Maintain frequent contact
- Find common ground
- Acknowledge that they are trying to be good parents; find something positive to say about their parenting, even if it's small
- Provide a welcoming school environment

Be Respectful

- Watch tone, body language, or other ways that reinforce a power differential
- Avoid intimidation strategies
- Make meetings and procedures convenient; be flexible with deadlines
- Actively listen – determine what the parent is really angry about

Use Trauma-Informed Strategies to De-escalate

- Use a calm, low voice.
- Don't rush the parent; suggest a moment to take a breath.
- Modulate your own trauma response: flight, fight, or freeze.
- Understand that parents may have their own negative school experiences that they bring to the situation.

Make Expectations Clear

- Provide a written handbook for parents who are new to the school district.
- Don't blindside parents, especially with written correspondence sent to them by mail or via their children.
- Be clear about what you can do and cannot do.
- Our parent resources can help explain the McKinney-Vento Act to parents.

Help Parents Be Successful

- Help keep them accountable (e.g., a parent contract for transportation to the school of origin, a meeting reminder by phone call).
- Help them advocate appropriately for their child and navigate complex systems in the LEA.
- Connect them to resources.

Sometimes You Have to Draw the Line

- Know when to end a conversation. Don't tolerate dishonest or abusive behavior but leave the path open to resolution or redemption (e.g., reschedule a meeting without judgment or threat).
- Have a third party available to facilitate a subsequent meeting.
- Initiate the dispute process.

NYSTEACHS.org

Assistance Center for Homeless Students

MEASUREMENT

Use the M-V Dispute Process as a Tool for Resolution

- Provide a written notice (required by law).
- Review the dispute process with the parent—in person if possible.
- Be mindful of what you say—be objective.
- Keep detailed notes of your conversations.
- Assist the parent in gathering evidence.
- If the dispute does not rule in the parent's favor, assist them and their child with any transitions.
